Excellent

From an early age I discovered I loved fixing, upgrading and tinkering around with things, such as cars and more specifically computers.

I've always had a passion for computers and how they work which led me into studying computer science after high school. As much as I loved studying computer science after a year and a half I realized I wanted to combine my problem solving mindset with my creative side and use the skills I've learnt from University and swap over to a Diploma in Web Design and Development at Ara | Te Pūkenga Institute of Skills & Technology.

Throughout my work experience I have developed a high level of customer service which displays my understanding of patience and empathy.

I am really excited to start my career in the I.T industry and am even more excited to learn and further progress my skills and knowledge knowing I am ready to take on any challenge that may present itself.
